Explore migration and identity
In comparative perspective
June 30-July 14, 2017
Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada

Learn
From the refugee crisis, to Brexit, to the US presidential election, issues of migration and identity raise controversy and defy simple solutions. This intensive summer course will bring together students and researchers from both sides of the Atlantic to explore these issues, drawing on scholarship in political science, sociology, history, art and literature.

Through seminar-style learning with Canadian and European experts, students will gain a greater understanding of historical and contemporary issues and policy debates in Canada and the EU. Seminars will include:

• Migration and identity in the EU and Canada
• Minorities in Canada
• Minorities in Europe
• Identity politics in Europe and Canada.

Experience
Halifax is an historic gateway to Canada and home to a diversity of communities. We'll make the most of our location with field trips that will allow students to engage with local minority communities as well as museums and historic sites.

Earn credits
The International Summer Institute on Migration and Identity offers visiting students a package that includes an intensive credit course (3 credit hours or 6 ECTS), experiences beyond the classroom, an optional ESL course, orientation, and on-campus accommodations. Bursaries may be available.

Apply by March 31, 2017
