Are you currently doing your bachelor and would like to deepen and broaden your knowledge and thinking? Do you enjoy critical reasoning, argumentation and clear thinking? Do you like to raise questions, or think about opinions and ideas in a more systematic way? Do you like to know more about the rich history of 2500 years of philosophizing? Then consider combining your own bachelor with a one-year bachelor "Philosophy of a specific discipline"!

The bachelor “Philosophy of a specific discipline” is an English-taught programme. After the first year of your bachelor, you enroll in this programme, while continuing with your own bachelor. “Philosophy of a specific discipline” consists of a Minor of 30 EC, introducing you to the history of philosophy and to some of the major philosophical areas such as ethics, philosophy of science, social-political philosophy, and logic. After the Minor you do three electives (15 EC) and follow one out of four courses which the programme offers on “the philosophy of the various disciplines” (5 EC). Finally, you write your thesis in a well-organized course (10 EC). The programme can be done in one year but you can also spread it out over two years. At the end of three or four years you have two bachelors!

Career prospects
Students in philosophy have many options on the job market. Because they have been trained as critical, analytical thinkers with a broad understanding of culture, society and the sciences, they can find jobs in several different areas. Our alumni have found jobs in:
- education (university, universities of applied sciences, high schools)
- journalism and communication
- business
- policy and research (ministeries, municipalities, political parties, universities, NGOs, etc.)
