GLOBAL ENGAGEMENT MODULE (GEM)

Do you have a pioneering spirit? Then embark on the first pilot edition of a new European programme to boost your global engagement! Apply before 15 October 2021 and become a truly globally engaged academic.

All major challenges we face today - from the climate crisis and energy transition to the digital revolution, public health and the need to build equitable societies - are indisputably issues that affect our whole planet and can only be dealt with effectively on a world scale. Each of these challenges goes well beyond the boundaries of traditional academic disciplines. The sum of specific skills and competencies, however important, does not suffice to tackle such issues.

If you want to be a truly globally engaged academic, you need to be equipped with the right mindset and generic competencies and skills. This means to identify not as a member of a state or a nation, but as a member of the human race, looking beyond the narrow scope of national or personal interests. A globally engaged academic understands and appreciates different perspectives and world views, and interacts successfully and respectfully with others, in order to take responsible action towards sustainability and collective well-being.

Of course, such skills and competencies require many years of dedication and experience. Nevertheless, the GEM has the ambitious goal to lay the first foundations for your global citizenship and career. It aims to create awareness and show the way to succeed in an increasingly global and dynamic world. By doing so, it aspires to fill a need overlooked by most traditional academic programmes. You can be one of the happy few to take part in this brand-new and innovative European adventure!
