Project call Language & Culture policy\(^1\): context, conditions and formats
Service departments (deadline 1 April 2016)

Context; strategic projects in education
The University of Groningen (UG) has the ambition to become a “truly international university” with an excellent reputation worldwide and a distinctive research and teaching profile (UG strategic plan 2016-2020). In teaching and learning, this requires an approach of activated, inclusive learning. This approach will be implemented through internationalised curricula, and the integrative use of innovative educational concepts like the international classroom, the flipped classroom, IT/e-learning, learning communities and the UG Language & Culture Policy.

Three strategic projects have been defined to achieve this distinctive international research and teaching profile:

1. The Language & Culture Policy. This specific call focuses on stimulating service departments and faculties to develop language and intercultural competences in line with task or didactics of all staff and students in a multilingual and multicultural context.
2. The International Classroom. A specific call is launched to faculties concurrently with this one to stimulate faculties to develop international classrooms in faculties.
3. The Learning Communities. Another specific call is launched to faculties concurrently with this one to stimulate faculties to form such communities for inclusive, activated group-based learning.

This call focuses on the Language & Culture Policy (LCP) which goes way further than teaching alone. It has to do with creating an inclusive environment throughout the entire university.

For UG, the LCP in short, aims at the following:
- Ensure a proper level of English, Dutch, any other relevant language for all staff (scientific and support) and students (related to didactics/task);
- Create more intercultural awareness and develop appropriate intercultural competences.

Through the development of appropriate language and intercultural skills in a specific context, LCP aims to contribute to making UG a “truly international university”.

Possible synergy in project plans
Although this is not applicable for service departments, we do want to inform you that faculties are encouraged to look for the synergy amongst the three strategic initiatives, they obviously are related.

The Language and Culture Policy project supports the International Classroom as does the Learning Communities project and vice versa. Ideally, an integrated approach to the three projects would deliver faculties synergistic benefits. Such an integrated approach is stimulated and faculties may describe that in their project plans and specifically refer to these interrelations. Such an integrated approach is not a requirement but an option, however.

Important to know
At UG central level we are, amongst other things, working on LCP fundamentals giving a framework to language and culture for now and for the future. Although it may seem that the fundamentals focus on staff only, know that we are preparing student-related fundamentals as well.

a language/intercultural level system: a framework to determine which level of English/Dutch/other language or intercultural competence a staff member should have based on UFO profile, international context, tasks (system will be accessible for all staff members). Implementation into Results & Development interviews after levels have been determined.
(Language Centre, CIT and HR)

a terminology database/style guide: update/renew the existing terminology database and style guide.
(Language Centre)

testing: testing method and system to keep track of who has been tested and with which results (related to level system).
(Language Centre)

UTQ (University Teaching Qualification): how to integrate language and intercultural competence into the UTQ in such a way that, eventually, all lecturers will have enough knowledge and skills of both fields to lead an international classroom.
(ESI, Language Centre)

Preferred providers
We recommend you to work with our preferred providers when drawing up and carrying out your project call. They, and the programme manager as well, are very willing to think along. You will find the courses offered by the language center and HR on the my university website together with the LCP project call. You will find the ESI offer in the international classroom project plan. Apart from the existing courses, tailor-made options are possible!

Language & Culture policy; overall conditions for service department plan

1. The service department plan has to be send in by the service department directorate before 1 April 2016 and needs to have the explicit commitment to provide 50% match in money for the budget required, and the budget plan needs to be approved by the Department of Corporate Control.

2. The service department plan describes the further development and implementation of language and culture (incl. objectives and approach) with reference to the February 2015 document describing LCP goals and recommendations.

3. It focuses on both language and culture related to task and covers all support staff.

4. It motivates the choice of courses/programmes/other initiatives (cover sheet support staff; information sheet per activity, see formats).

5. It not only describes the further development and implementation till 1 January 2018 (running period Language & Culture policy project), but also how the service department plans to structurally embed Language and Culture after 1 January 2018.

6. It is in line with the UG strategy (2016-2020) and contributes to the service department strategy for internationalization.

7. Initiatives on language and/or culture carried out after 1 October 2015 can be included in the call to file for matching.

8. A brief progress report is required half-way the project and an evaluation in writing needs to be submitted in December 2017.

9. The plan will by assessed by the LCP steering group before 1 May 2016.
