

Teaching Academy Groningen

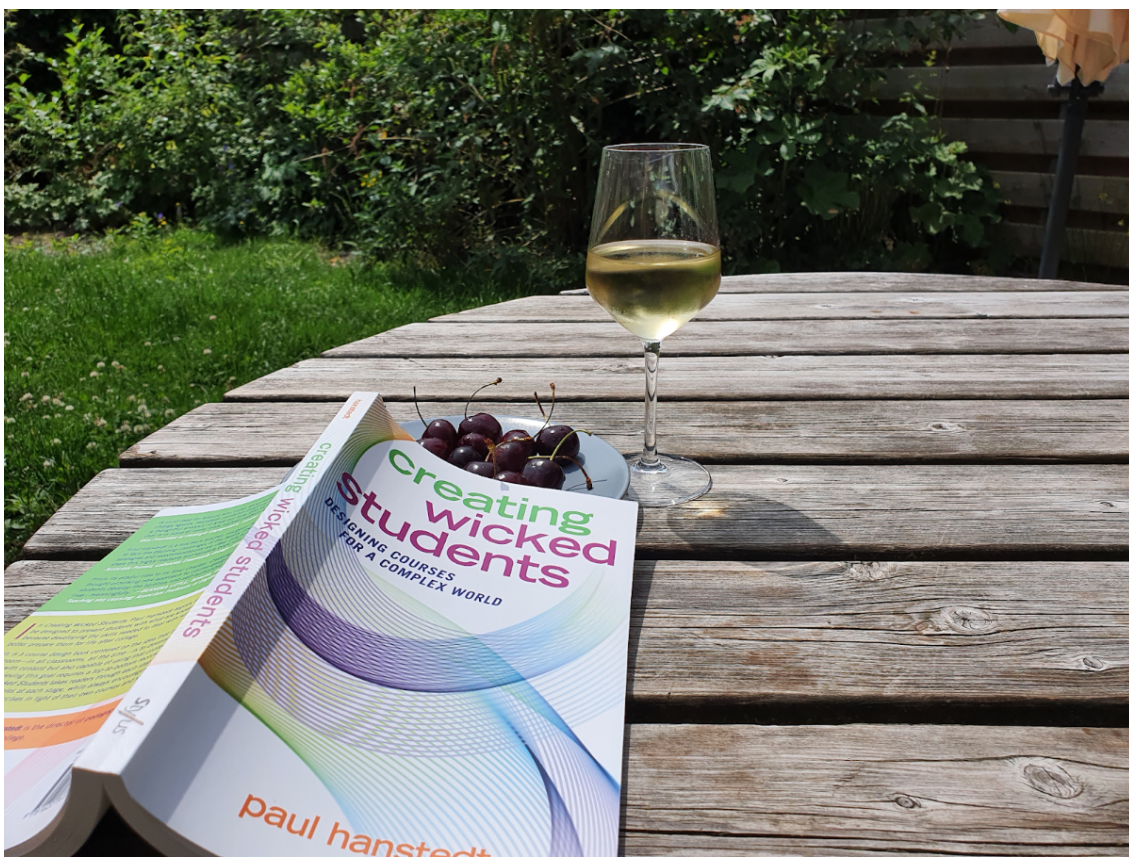

The Teaching Academy Groningen (TAG) is a platform for and by teachers to share good practices and develop knowledge in order to enhance innovative education at the University of Groningen.

Summer vacation is in sight (finally!). Before you know it you can enjoy a holiday. Until then, we have some noteworthy updates for you in our last newsflash before the well deserved summer-break. A summer school for onboarding academic teachers is planned for 23-26 August. You can read more about the workshops we organized, about the Comenius grant and the help of teaching assistants in your classroom. We have a great book tip for the holidays and a nice range of upcoming workshops and events.

The silver lining of the pandemic Interdisciplinary education under the spotlight

This last year has been a challenging one (to say the least). Who would have thought that the entire world would be held hostage to an emerging virus? Science gave us a vaccine in record time, but it was soon very clear that the situation was much more complex than “simply” producing safe and effective vaccines. To solve this wicked problem an interdisciplinary approach could be the answer. Read more.

Definitions and context of blended learning

A common playfield

After the Education Festival, exchanging a lot of best practices and thinking about what the right pace should be for the next steps in Blended Learning, we want to continue these discussions in the Community of Practice. For example, what are the definitions and context of Blended learning? What is for example the difference between online learning and hybrid learning? And what are the benefits of both? For our definition, we agree that blended learning combines online teaching with on-site education. Read more

Looking forward to the new academic year (and rising student numbers)

It requires Teacher- Teaching Assistant teamwork

After 1.5 year of teaching in pandemic conditions, we see a new challenge emerging: increasing student numbers. How do we run a course with 300 students efficiently and effectively? And what if it becomes 700 students? During the TAG Webinar “TAs to the rescue?”, teachers from various faculties have shared their strategies on teaming up with your teaching assistant. Curious about other speakers and ESI advice? Check out the recordings! Read more

Pack your bags for the next academic year

What do teachers need to pack for inclusive teaching?

What do we pack in our bags for the next academic year? Teachers wish for support from an inclusive organization, clarity about definitions, and structures that enable sharing experiences and resources. Read more

TAG congratulates Bharath Ganesh!

For being awarded the Comenius Teaching Fellowship in the call 2021. Bharath Ganesh is assistant professor at the Faculty of Arts, department Centre for Media and Journalism Studies. In his Comenius project Bharath will develop Pixascope, a set of tools for visual analytics for social media research in the MA in Social Media & Society. Bharath will start 1 September 2021 until 31 October 2022. We are looking forward to his result.
