The Summer Pre-LLM is a 20 ECTS bridging programme for students holding a LLB, who want to enter the LLM Governance and Law in Digital Society at the Campus Fryslan of the University of Groningen, but lack a social science background. Once candidates have successfully completed the pre-LLM programme, they can enroll in the Master’s programme.
Summer Pre-LLM Programme Governance and Law in Digital Society

The main target groups are students with a law degree comparable to a Dutch law degree, with courses on constitutional law, administrative law, international or European law and civil law.

The Summer Pre-LLM consists of four intense courses: social science research, social science theory, policy science and theories of public governance.

The classes are scheduled in the second and third week of August. To participate in the classes, it is necessary to prepare for the courses beforehand.

On the 1st of May, course reading and associated assignments will be made available.

Students will work on the assignments between the 1st of May and the beginning of the classes, when they need to hand in the first drafts.

During the classes, students work on a redraft of the assignments, which they hand in at the end of the course. Each course ends with a written exam. A successful completion of the assignments and the written exams will grant admission to the LLM Governance and Law in Digital Society.

The course descriptions of the separate courses are available in the Online Course Catalogue, rug.nl/ocasys
