MSc project on Seychelles warblers (start: June 2022).

We are looking for an enthusiastic master student with an affinity for ecological fieldwork to do a project on Seychelles warblers on the island Cousin, Seychelles. During fieldwork (mid to end of June until end August this year), the student will be working together with PhD students from various universities (e.g. University of East Anglia, Norwich; University of Sheffield, both UK). The student will help with general fieldwork, like catching birds and observations, but there is also room for an independent project. A project will be designed in consultation with and supervised by Jan Komdeur, and could involve behaviour, ecology, evolution, genetics or physiology depending on the student’s interests. If interested, please send your motivation letter and CV to Jan Komdeur as soon as possible (j.komdeur@rug.nl).
