Chronology

10 or 11 XII 1900  Jung named assistant to Paul Eugen Bleuler at the Burg-hölzli in Zurich.

4 VI - 25 VII 1902  Observations made on the woman whose case is studied in A Case of Hysterical Stupor in a Prisoner in Detention, C.W. I, § 226-300.

3 VI 1903  Admission to the Burghölzli of the spinning-craftsman whose case is described in On Simulated Insanity, C.W. I, § 301-355 and in Medical Opinion on a Case of Simulated Insanity, C.W. I, § 356-429.

VI 1905  Psychoanalytical treatment of a patient suffering from obsession by Jung (lasting 3 weeks). This case is set out in Psychoanalysis and Association Experiments, C.W. II, § 660-727.

1 X - 21 XII 1905  Psychoanalytical treatment of a hysterical female patient. This case is studied in Association, Dream, and Hysterical Symptom, C.W. II, § 793-862.

11 IV 1906  Freud writes a letter of thanks to Jung for sending him the Diagnostische Assoziationsstudien I. (1F)

27 V 1906  The Congress of the Süd-Westdeutschen Neurologen und Irrenärzte at Baden-Baden. In his lecture Aschaffenburg attacks Freud, but Jung, in his turn, defends him. This incident brings on a correspondence between the two which unfortunately is lost. Jung will write a repartee on the lecture of Aschaffenburg: Freud's Theory of Hysteria: A Reply to Aschaffenburg, C.W. IV, § 1-26. (Jones II, p. 124; 2J)

VII 1906  The text of The Psychology of Dementia Praecox, C.W. III, § 1-316 is completed (as dated in the preface).

5 X 1906  Jung sends his thanks to Freud for the consignment of Collected Short Papers on the Theory of the Neuroses. (2J)

3-4 XI 1906 37th Versammlung Süd-Westdeutsche Irrenärzte at Tübingen. Jung defends Freud but maintains, according to his opinion, the disposition as the ultimate cause of the hysteria. (conference report)

26 XI 1906 Jung sends Freud a copy of his Freud’s Theory of Hysteria: A Reply to Aschaffenburg. (6J)

29 XII 1906 Freud receives Jung’s The Psychology of Dementia Praecox. (9J)

1 I 1907 Freud invites Jung to Vienna to discuss the problem of the dementia praecox. (11F)

3 III 1907 Jung visits Freud in Vienna with L. Binswanger. They were present at the Wednesday-evening meeting of the Viennese group on 6 March. (16J and Minutes I, p. 138)

IV - VI 1907 The dispute concerning paranoia and dementia praecox is the main theme in the correspondence between Freud and Jung.

26 V 1907 Jung completes Disturbances of Reproduction in the Association Experiment, C.W. II, § 918-938. (26J)

± 14 - ± 28 VI 1907 Jung visits the Salpêtrière in Paris and confers with Janet. After the visit, he is very disappointed. (31J and 33J)

25 VI 1907 The first letter of Freud to Abraham thanking him for the consignment of On the Significance of Juvenile Traumas for the Symptomatology of Dementia Praecox.

14 VII - ± 7 VIII Jung fulfills his annual military service. (35J)

VII - VIII 1907 Correspondence between Freud and Abraham about dementia praecox at a time when this topic disappears in his correspondence with Jung who is preparing his lecture for the conference in Amsterdam.

27 IX 1907 First meeting of the Freud group in Zurich. (46J, 47J, Jones II, p. 44 and 81)

1 X 1907 The ‘Ratman’ begins his analysis with Freud (which lasts until September 1908). (Editor’s introduction in S.E.)
6 X 1907 Abraham announces to Freud his resignation at the Burghölzli because he, as a German and Jew, had no chance of promotion. (48J)

28 X 1907 For the first time, Jung mentions his problems of transference in his relation with Freud. (49J)

26 XI 1907 In Zurich, Jung delivers the lecture: The Significance of Freud’s Teachings for Neurology and Psychiatry, C.W. XVIII, § 922.

End XI (24 - 29 ?) Jones visits Jung in Zurich. (54J, Jones II, p. 43)

30 XI 1907 Jung proposes to Freud to organize a congress. (54J)

15 - 20 XII 1907 Abraham visits Freud in Vienna. (55F, 57F, Jones II, p. 38, letter of Abraham to Freud, 6 December 1907)

16 I 1908 Jung’s Lecture at the Rathaus in Zurich: The Content of the Psychoses, C.W. III, § 317-387.

27 I 1908 Freud receives the text of The Content of the Psychoses and will publish it in his Schriften zur angewandten Seelenkunde. (66F)

20 II 1908 Jung presents his view on the teleological meaning of auto-erotism in dementia praecox.

3 III 1908 Freud poses the problem of the relation between projection in hallucination and in paranoia. (76J)

14 III 1908 In his course of lectures Freud delves into the matter of Jung’s The Psychology of Dementia Praecox (80F).

14 IV 1908 Freud reads the text of Jung’s lecture from the congress at Amsterdam: The Freudian Theory of Hysteria, as well as Jung’s publication with Bleuler: Komplexe und Krankheitursachen bei Dementia Praecox. (82F)

19 IV 1908 Freud asks Jung for medical help for Otto Gross who is addicted to cocaine and seems to be developing a paranoia. (84F)

27 IV 1908 Zusammenkunft für Freudsche Psychologie (considered later as the First International Congress) in Salzburg. Abraham delivers the lecture The Psycho-Sexual Differences between Hysteria and Dementia Praecox and Jung delivers the lecture On Dementia Praecox. Foundation of the Jahrbuch. (Jones II, p. 45 ss.)

V 1908 Letters from Freud to Jung and Abraham asking them to settle their dispute. (87F, 91J, 92F, letters from Freud to Abraham, 3 and 9 May, letters from Abraham to Freud, 11 and 19 May)
14 V 1908  Otto Gross stays at the Burghölzli and undergoes analysis with Jung. (93J, 94F)

25 V 1908  Jung announces that the analysis of Gross is virtually finished. (95J)

17 VI 1908  Gross escapes from the Burghölzli. Jung writes Freud about the difference between dementia praecox (Pompei) and hysteria (Pompei + Rome). (98J)

VI 1908  Abraham remarks to Freud that psychoanalysis is being abandoned in Zurich. (Letters from Abraham to Freud, 9, 16, 20, and 31 July) Freud decides to travel to Zurich to clarify the situation and also because Jung proposed to meet him for a discussion about the notions ‘dementia praecox’, ‘schizophrenia’ and ‘paranoia’. (100J, 101F, 102J, 103F, 106F)

5 VIII 1908  Freud sends Jung the text of the ‘Little Hans’ for the Jahrbuch. (104F)

22 VIII - 8 IX 1908  Jung spends his holiday in a cabin on the Säntis mountain.

18 - 21 IX 1908  Freud is Jung’s guest (in the Burghölzli and not in the house in Küsnacht, as Jones says (Jones II, p. 58)). Jung presents the patient Babette from The Psychology of Dementia Praecox. (Notes in the Freud/Jung Letters after 110F)

15 X 1908  For the first time Freud is analyzing a dementia praecox patient. (110F)

8 XI 1908  The second edition of The Interpretation of Dreams is ready. (112F)

Betw. 29 XI and 3XII  Birth of Franz Jung, Jung’s third child.

3 XII 1908  Jung completes The Significance of the Father in the Destiny of the Individual, C.W. IV, § 693-744. (117J)

11 XII 1908  Freud is obsessed with discovering the ‘nuclear complex’ of the neuroses. (118F)

26 XII 1908  Freud points out to Jung that auto-eroticism must be considered as not having an object. (122F)

7 I 1909  Jung reports that his friend Pfister has started a campaign in favor of Freud. (124J)

1 - VIII 1909  Report in the correspondence on the observations of Jung’s daughter Agathli (‘little Anna’). (126J, 128J, 129F, 132F, 133J, 134F...)

End VI 1914 Termination of the analysis of the ‘Wolfman’. (Gardiner, p. 110)

Bibliography

Since our study was devoted to a specific topic, it has not been our intention to give a complete bibliography on either Freud or Jung. After providing a few bibliographical notes, we will restrict ourselves to a list of the articles and books by Freud and Jung mentioned in our text together with the page numbers where these works are discussed. Thus the list will, at the same time, act as an index. Finally, we will give a selected bibliographical list with the full references of only the books and articles cited in our text and footnotes.

Some Bibliographical Notes

The complete works of C.G. Jung have also been published in German and in English. Unfortunately, the chronological order has not been maintained and, with only a few exceptions, the latest (and many times completely reworked) version of the text is given without any critical apparatus. The text of Jung’s works has a certain advantage over that of Freud’s. The volume numbers and even the paragraph numbers of each text correspond in both the German and English editions (a few discrepancies in vol. 6, 8, 11, 14 excepted...): Die gesammelte Werke von C.G. Jung, Zurich, Rascher, 1958-1970 and Olten, Walter, 20 vol., 1971-. The Collected Works of C.G. Jung, London, Routledge and Kegan Paul, 20 vol., 1953-1979. The siglum ‘C.W.’ followed by the paragraph number therefore refers to the same text in both versions without distinction, except in the few cases which are explicitly mentioned. In these cases, the siglum ‘G.W.’ will be used for the German edition.

During the time it took to complete both series, The English translations of various German titles have been changed. The reader who trusted the lists at the bottom of the earlier issued volumes might be deceived in the same way this author sometimes was. The instrument for avoiding such confusion is provided by the General Bibliography of C.G. Jung’s Writings, which forms the 19th volume of The Collected Works of C.G. Jung and gives the reciprocal cross-references between the Collected Works and the Gesammelte Werke.

For more bibliographical information on Freud, we refer to the bibliographical essay in P. GAY, Freud. A Life for our Time, New York, Norton, 1988. Concerning Jung, the information supplied by Gay on p. 759-760 is, however, rather brief and should be expanded.

Finally, two other books should be mentioned. One of the first attempts to give a presentation of Jung’s life and work was: E. BENNET, C.G. Jung, London, Barrie & Rockliff, 1961. A more recent and shorter work is that of: V. BROME, Jung. Man and Myth, London, MacMillan, 1978.

Another very interesting book should not go unmentioned here. Clearly influenced by contemporary French thought, this work focuses upon the problem of the foundation of authority and time in both Freud’s and Jung’s work. Very concise in the presentation of its argument, it presupposes a basic knowledge of both authors: G. HOGENSOHN, Jung’s Struggle with Freud, Notre Dame, University of Notre Dame Press, 1983.

Bibliographical References and Index of the Texts by Freud and Jung Discussed in this Book

The chronological organization of the S.E. allows us to refer in a clear way to Freud’s text by using the dates as they are given in this series. For Jung’s texts, such an organization is more difficult. The bibliography in the 19th volume of the C.W. provides separate chronological lists of Jung’s works according to their publication in a particular language. Using the list as it is given for the English translation would be very confusing since it would in no way respect the real chronological order of Jung’s writings. We therefore will use the numbers given in the C.W. for the German text as follows. In the cases where a particular work was originally written by Jung in another language, while the German version appeared later, thus rendering the references from the German list in the C.W. confusing, we situated the text in its proper place in our list, indicating this fact with an asterisk (*) after the year.
