And friends.

I. Leusbrock
Well, now I am supposed to find some proper closing words for this thesis and all the work, time and memories wrapped around it. It is quite difficult to find these words now if you want to acknowledge everyone, who has contributed in one way or the other to this thesis and in the way they deserve it. So, if you do not find yourself back in the following pages in the way you were expecting it, I am sorry for that. If this should really be the case, feel free to drop by, to complain to me about that and help me remember the good ol’ times with a drink or two next to that.

First of all I want thank Geert Versteeg for giving me the opportunity to finish and defend my PhD thesis. Furthermore, I want to thank Glenn Rexwinkel for his input in my work and his useful advice during the last years. The members of the reading and the defense committee I want to thank for their work, for their time and their contribution in helping me finish this last part of my thesis.

Cees and Johannes, my thanks to you two for making your vision of Wetsus become true. To establish a research center on the one of the most important issues we are facing right now, this in the middle of Friesland / Nowhere, against all the resistances, doubts and problems you had to face, deserves a lot of respect. Therefore, I am really grateful that you have created a setting where I could work during my PhD and where I have enjoyed to work. Especially the fact, that you were open for discussion for all issues I had, was always a pleasant experience.

Sybrand, I have to be thankful for all your support and input you have given me, all your recommendations. Nevertheless, I am still waiting for the moment when you tell a joke about us Germans, which is actually funny. But don’t give up and keep practicing. Gert-Jan, also my thanks to you for your support and our discussions about all things around Wetsus, research, my project and the rest of the world. All the other supervisors from Wetsus (Henk, Arie, Bert, Hardy, Michel among all the others) I have to thank for their input, comments and discussions throughout all the years. The members of the salt theme I have to thank for their input during our meetings and also to sharing their PoVs on my project. It helps tremendously if things are also evaluated from a “user-position” since this usually cannot done by a PhD himself.

The secretaries (esp. Trienke and Helena) I have to thank for helping me out with all the little problems I had once in a while and making things work out in the end. The analytical staff (Jelmer, Janneke and Pieter) I have to thank for enduring my billions of samples, for their informative lab police mails and for generating a positive mood in the analytical lab. Furthermore, my thanks go to our handy men - Wim, Harm, Harrie - for helping me out when I had once again managed to destroy my setup and for finding solutions for all the weird little additions I wanted to have for my setup. It is a pity that this little masterpiece of modern engineering is now getting dusty in the lab and does not get all the love it would deserve. My students - Sonia, Thibaut and Alain - I have to thank for all your efforts they have put in my project during their stay at Wetsus. Merci beaucoup.

Furthermore my thanks go to all the people who helped me finishing the actual thesis by correcting my German version of scientific English (Martina esp. among others) or by translating something to Dutch (Paula). This work is also partly your work.

My thanks also go to my two paranymphs, Tom “Mama, I want a purple membrane for Christmas” Sleutels and Philipp “Schimanski” Kuntke. All my gratitude for helping me out during the very last phase of my PhD. It is an honour for me to have you two as paranymphs.

It is rather incredible that so many people managed to deal with me in one office without strangling me every day, even when I was especially grumpy in the morning. Sandra, my thanks for bringing a good mood to the office every day. Natasja, my thanks for sharing your smiles, laughter and problems with me. Bart, thanks for all the help during the years, for our daily exchange of Matlab and other “scientific” problems, new music to listen to, new books to read and other nerdish / childish ideas. I really miss that part. Elmar, thanks for being Elmar. And no, Bruno. I won’t mention you here in a positive way. You were just complaining, complaining, complaining, complaining. Oh, did I mention you have complained a lot? But nevertheless, it was to good to have someone around who had even a more negative attitude towards the world than I had.

All the members of the Wetsus band I have to thank for being part of the band. I had a wonderful time with you guys. We might not have been the best musicians, but at least we had a lot of fun. Loes, thank you for all the time you put into the band, especially in the beginning.

My Irish pub crew and PubQuiz colleagues. Thank you for all the evenings (and nights). Thank you for all the laughter and stories, for all the discussions we had about life, Wetsus, spiderpigs and why french people just don’t cut it. I hope that we won’t stop with this tradition and we’ll have another pint once in a while. I have to keep practicing my Guinness smileys, you know? Also my kudos to all the other people with whom I have spent time with during the weekends, during the parties, during paintballing, during playing squash (Piotr, you are still too slow), during all other stuff we did together. Thank you for all these beautiful memories. I also have to thank all my dinner victims who I have had as guests in the last years. I really hope that you have enjoyed the food and did not just smile to me because you wanted to be polite.

Further special thanks go to (in no specific order): Tim, for sharing all the fresh-made coffee with me; Lucia, for bringing all the glove to Wetsus; Claudia, for showing the world that Portugal can beat (up) France; Agata, for being the only person in the world, who is even more sarcastic than me; Ana and Sandra, for being the loonies; Maxime, the only french person, who can whistle the melody of Spiderpig without his front teeth; Piotr, for introducing me to polish wodka and the importance of buffalo pee in it; Tom, for being as crazy as you are; Elmar and Astrid, for bringing a bit of Sissi and Franzl to Friesland; Petra, for being something unique; Paula, for all the discussions and ideas we had; Aleid, for being a great person to talk to; Philipp, for being the proof that people actually like to swim at 6.00 in the morning; Martina, for being there. To you all and all the others, which I have not mentioned explicitly in these lines, be aware that I am also thankful to you for all the things, which made my time at Wetsus so enjoyable. Kudos to you all.

Meiner Familie danke ich fuer all den Rueckhalt und Unterstuetzung in all den Jahren, fuer die aufmunternden Worte in schlechten Zeiten, fuer das offene Ohr, das ich brauchte, um meinen Frust und Probleme irgendwo abzulassen, fuer einfach alles. Ohne Euch alle waere ich nie soweit gekommen. Ich hoffe, Ihr wisst das. Meinen herzlichen Dank fuer
Ok, this is it. My last words in this thesis. Thanks to you all once more. That’s all I still have to say at this point.

Cheers,
Ingo
