Truly, PhD is as much an activity about science as about interacting and learning from/about people around you. I wish to acknowledge all those who helped me in the science business but also helped my quality of life.

Since one is associated with a supervisor continuously for 4 years (if one is lucky/unlucky), eventually that person will influence personal interest in science and even leave a mark on one’s personality. Sven van IJzendoorn, I wish to extend my hartelijk gratitude to you for being such an approachable and friendly supervisor. In many ways, you have been a role model in the dedication and efforts you put into work. Your enthusiasm is infectious and the regular brainstorm, inspirational. I wish to thank you for helping me improve my scientific aptitude, showing confidence in me and helping me #notmakefoolofmyself from time to time.

Thank you, Dick Hoekstra, you have been a great support and your invaluable advices kept me focused. Edmond Rings, I am very grateful to you for your kind words of admiration and support. In spite of being so busy with the clinics, you always found time to discuss the work progress.

I extend my gratitude to the 10th floor PIs, Inge Zuhorn, Wia Baron and Jan Willem-Kok for being such great mentors. Your work ethics, enthusiasm and critical comments have always been useful. I truly admire the great chemistry that the PIs from the 10th floor maintain with their students which makes the atmosphere quite gezellig as well as the tight rope they walk on daily, balancing work and life (except when it comes to paper submission).

My big thanks to Jenny Dallinga, Ina Hummel (I need your autograph), Karin Klappe, Anita Nomden for always being so wonderfully helpful. Thanks Jan Wijbenga for your invaluable help, esp. during LiqN2 calamity. Not once did you all hesitate in helping and sharing your experiences with us. Without Gerry Hoogenberg and Yvon Westra, any administrative procedures would have been so difficult. Combining the University and UMCG papers and sorting it out again must be a tough job. Thank you, Tini, for helping the students fit-in. I would like to acknowledge the GUIDE office for efficiently organizing the papers and formalities and the ISD for all the help with the residence permit.

I am grateful to Andy Thunnissen, Klaas Nico Faber and the PIs in the Department of Cell Biology for the inputs in DCB work-in-progress meetings. Thank you, Klaas Sjollema, for all your tips and help with the microscopes (Sp8 was a game-changer!); Jeroen Kuipers, for the help with EM and microvilli. I haven’t forgotten the bag-o-rice!

My awesome lab-mates were my window to the outer world and helped me remain sane, starting with the office people- Christiaan Slim (big fan!), I am indebted to you for all the lab/non-lab, rational/irrational, small/big things you have taught me/non-me (hn?). I enjoyed our various discussions! Thank you, Nai-Hua Hsiao, for your valuable contributions; Marjolein Bijlard, for always setting a great office atmosphere with your discussions, food and humour; Lucja Jarosz, for blending into our craziness and being so helpful; Josephine Stoffels, for judicious handling of cosy-journal-club; Erik Sikkema for your help and inspiring us in the lab; Alex and Jing Qin, for teaching us to be always relaxed and cool. Hande Ozgen, I always admire your sincerity to work and enjoy quarrelling with you. I have learnt a lot from you, especially after the trust test :)! Cuifeng Wang (#%*$!), you always helped me a lot, advised me on women and pushed me for jogging. So, I became thin but you....!! It was a pleasure to know the new folks as well: Charlotte de Jong, Bojana Mikus, Inge Werkman, Edwin de Jong, Peng Wang and my awesome paranimfs, Leon Klunder (new?) and Arend Overeem (MVID poster boy). I am already missing our awesome #DCB10.

How can I forget the graduated PhD fellows who set a nice lab culture and are now found laughing at other struggling PhDs: Peter Meszaros, Michel, Mirjana Stancic, Bispo de Jesus (with his camera), Julia, Katica Stojanov, Zia Marwat (who always had great advice) and of course, Magda Golachowska (legs still sore with 28km walk?).

The acknowledgements would be incomplete without thanking the students who came and contributed to the lab: Gisela & Inge, Faisal, muffin loving Lucia Rijstenberg, Meena Kumari, Rodrigo Ortega (Pedro rofl), Nick & Fabian and Pieter Roelofs - without you, lab3 would be less awesome. I have learnt a lot from all of you. It was nice to make friends with visitors - Viorel Simion and Sukhdeep Galsinh or Suki.

Thank you, Anna Posafalvi, for making Groningen an enjoyable place. I found a great friend in you (karnemelk, salsa, looo-oong lunches, photographs, elephants...); Balaji Srinivasan (ka thullu), for always wishing well for me and switching-on your phone; Vaishali Kakkar-jee, for your care and prompt help. I am lucky to have known nice people like Frederike Bensch, Giuliana Martelli (desserts, laughs & big rescue), Marta Capala, Ena Sokol, Madina Art, Isabel Amaral, several GISA-Indians Yamini Nanduri, Senthil Murugappan, Pragnya Maduskar, Arun Thiruvalluvan, Lakshmi Maruthi, Pallavi Sontakke, Khayum, Eswar Reddy, Prachi and Bhushan Bhat, Harsh Vinjemoor, Saritha Adepu, Ankita Khanna, Suri Vijay, Yashaswini Mungara, Akshay, Tushar Tomar, Swapnil Bhujbal, Varsha Pingale and especially Milind Pore and Vineet Mahajan (for your kindness and help). Enthusiasm amongst GISA members for their activities is indeed creditable. Occasionally, I could vent out my stress at Sportscenter, Zernike, where I found Idefix, a very welcoming association who helped me improve at table tennis (Haiko – lost badly though...). The foreign guest club / WIRE is an excellent concept and thanks to you, I dared to ice-skate. Thank you, Joanna Smolonska for your help with the thesis printing.

Thanks to social networking websites, I could be in touch with some school and college friends, Garware gang, NIV-mates etc. Vinay Rambal and Rohit Nalavade, I am glad you helped me adapt to European ways; Devdutt Kulkarni, Shreekant Deodhar, Raghav Kalia and Kashyap MV, Viraj Damle and Damle madam (making me PhD-wise), Charu Kapil, Madhura Athawale (trust vs trasta) and Ganesh Bhagwat, you were always just a ‘click’ away. I am indebted to you (Bedardi) Sanket Ponia, Ritu Berwal, Ketaki (Shurpali) and Kunal Pokale for your care and words of encouragement.

Harshal Zope (always available on delight, vectone, lyca, telfort, voip, skype, viber, hangout, whatsapp, landline) you have been a constant source of motivation. Staying with Harshad (Korreweg, Lewenborg, indoor-cricket, loempia..) and Sneha Patil has been truly memorable! Sabyasachi Senapati (Mogambo), I can’t thank you enough for your pitch report and a continuing partnership. Pooja Tiwari, I am filled with gratitude by your incessant supply of trust, tolerance and more importantly, time.

All along, my family and relatives have been my biggest supports, showering blessings and bestowing prosperity on me. Thank you, Suhasini for the cover sketch; Dipti for keeping in touch; Shweta & Peter van Biesen, for always being close by and especially Ramesh kaka for ‘keeping an eye’ on me. Lastly, I cannot thank you enough, (baba) Shrikant and (aai) Seema Dhekne, for spoiling me with your care, loads of affection, ceaseless patience and believing me when I said I am not good at math ;) !! Surely, so many blessings and wishes from you must have accumulated to form a powerful placebo, helping me in the most obtuse of situations.

P. G. Wodehouse rightly says, “It takes all to make one world”. I met so many interesting people in the multi-cultural atmosphere supported by the Netherlands, it took all of you (apologies if I missed someone) to accomplish this one PhD thesis.
