Welcome to what probably is the most-read part of this thesis! Completing a PhD. is not an easy task. It takes a lot of effort, and not only from the promovendus. During the past years a number of people and institutions have been essential for the completion of this thesis.

First of all I want to thank my first promotor Koen Kuijken. After doing my masters thesis under his supervision he also offered me a PhD. position, giving me the opportunity to embark on this interesting, yet challenging project. We didn’t see each other as often as we might have liked, but every time we did meet it was a pleasant, clarifying and motivating experience for me. After all these years it will be strange not to work together with him anymore and I hope we will stay in touch in the future. Koen, thanks for everything!

Also my other two promotors have been of great importance to me and to this project. Penny Sackett was the person who stepped in and kept me going when Koen was away for long periods. Furthermore she is an absolute microlensing expert and taught me a lot of the details. Arlin Crotts is the big man behind the MEGA project and allowed me to do my own thing within the collaboration, resulting in this thesis. He also taught me how to observe and showed me around Manhattan. Penny and Arlin, thanks a lot and keep in touch!

All other members of the MEGA collaboration should be thanked for their contributions to this thesis and for the environment in which it came to be. I would like to mention especially Robert Uglesich, Patrick Cseresnjes and Larry Widrow for their invaluable input and support in different stages of this project.

My thanks also goes to the reading committee for their careful reading of the manuscript and useful comments. Of course I also owe a lot of thanks to the people of the Kapteyn computer group, especially Wim and Eite. My first machine was, let’s say experimental, and we really noticed that! I lost count of all the hours that Eite spent with Soldner... But it was not in vain, in the end the thesis is here! The secretaries, Hennie, Jacky and Gineke, have helped me out lots of times with paperwork and stuff, thanks for all your help! I also thank the Kapteyn Institute and the Leids Kerkhoven-Bosscha Fonds for paying for all the trips I made over these years.

I would also like to thank all the people that are not directly involved with my work, but that have supported me otherwise and made sure I had a life outside the institute as well: my family and friends.

Laat ik beginnen met mijn ouders te bedanken voor hun steun en hun interesse in mijn werk. Jullie hebben altijd achter mij en mijn keuzes gestaan, al was het altijd duidelijk dat het leven als sterrenkundige een onzeker bestaan is. Heit en Mem, bedankt! Romke, bro, als mijn carrière als sterrenkundige vastloopt, vertrouw ik erop dat jij wat voor me kunt regelen! Succes met alles en kijk uit voor rondvliegende pool-bal len!

Dan alle “studievrienden”: Erik, Gerke, Henk, Jacco, Pui-Kei en Teake (de zeven pilaren van de wijsheid) en natuurlijk ook alle “aanhang”: Saskia, Joyce, Marcia en Jorrit. Is het al weer zo lang geleden dat we het quantum huiswerk van Henk en Teake overschreven en ons vervolgens aan belangrijker dingen als koffie en klaverjassen wijdden? Ik hoop dat we onze traditie van spelfeesten nog lang in stand zullen houden. Adriaan, bedankt voor je pogingen mij te helpen bij het leren gitara spelen en voor de kans om een promotie ook vanuit het perspectief van de paranimf te beleven.

All the people in the Kapteyn Institute made it a great place to be during my PhD, certainly in social respects. There are a lot of things I will miss about this place, for example the coffee breaks at 4 o’clock, the happy hours and of course the Kastanjefeest. But most of all I will miss the people I got to know here, some of whom I have been missing for some time already. You all made the past 5 and a half years a great time that I will remember for the rest of my life.

The people one is closest to (physically) in the office are of course ones office mates. In my case these were Wendy and Cesar for a short while and later on Rense and Giuseppina. Thanks for putting up with me and not always letting me work!

Ole, thanks for all the pancakes, darts matches, and programming help. I hope we can soon have a band reunion and play our perfectly good guitars again! Giusy, thanks for being such a great friend, for making my life a lot less boring, and of course for all the countless aperitifs. I bet that our trip to Bologna will remain the most adventurous ever! Filippo, you will always be my favourite director. I still hope you will make me famous one day... Thanks for all your wise words(?) and advices. Leticia, thanks for being a great friend and just one of the cutest and funniest girls I know. Since you didn’t translate my summary into Spanish, you still owe me one! Meredes, your cynical remarks and weird emails were the highlight of many of my (working) days. Thanks for being my friend, I hope we stay in touch. Merce and Leti, should I also mention that memorable trip to Heidelberg, with Italian car, Dutch driver, Spanish navigator who didn’t even know the address, and lazy Portuguese passenger, being stopped by the German police? No, better not, you two already did. Jeronimo, how long have we been waiting for a match between Heerenveen and Betis? I hope it will happen soon! Emilio, hola cabron! I know it is hard to accept for you, but you’re really not my idol. Rense, together we managed to make our office the social center of the institute, at least around 2 pm. And I have to admit that your holes are quite interesting. Thanks for being a great office mate. Katarina, thanks for letting me practice my massaging skills on you. Are they amaaaaaazing or a disaaaaaaster? Paolo, breaking that alliance was really not something personal! Thanks for all the cd’s you borrowed me, introducing me to Italian music. You’re a nice guy, but stay away from my ears... Mirjam, when will we sing and play guitar again? Thanks for all the dinners at your place, your pea-soup is the best! Annette, do the numbers 6-0 mean anything to you? Thanks for always being so nasty, for being an interesting travelling companion, and thanks in advance for giving me my next job! Tim, thanks for letting me stay in your place almost every time I came to Tucson for observations. Willem, thanks for all the mini-pool matches and all the immature jokes. Neil, thanks for always being cheerful. Don’t take your clothes off in too many gay bars! Martin, it was good to have a fellow-microrelener in the institute, but we both have to move on to something else now. Thanks for helping me prove my car can be useful!

There is much more I would like to mention: there were great pool evenings a long time ago with Willem, Henk, Joris, Hans(i), Leon, Martin, Tim and Ronald; the glorious darts victory of Jero and me in İñigo’s place; watching Mexico play in the World Cup at 8 in the morning while having a great Mexican breakfast; the scuba diving lesson and water skiing sessions thanks to Jan and Els; the many mini-pool matches with Willem and professional commentary from Ronald; and I could go on for some time. Since it would go too far to mention everything, I will just thank here all the people I have not yet mentioned: Diah, Eline, Jacquie, Ilse, Marco, Lourdes, Henrik, Michiel, Stephanie, Mark, Mark, Miguel, Pablo, Matteo, Christiaan, Fabrice, Bjorn, Jorge, Wilfred, Katia, Philippe, Benne, Peter, Alvaro, Alvaro, Bruno, Yang-Shyang, Edo, Mirela, Chris, Isabel, Erwin, Dieter, Teffie, Gert, Alicia, Nicola: without all of you the institute wouldn’t have been the same!

Finally I want to thank Elif. In you I have finally found what I have been looking for for a long time. Thank you for your love, and for making these last months of my PhD the best of all! In my best Turkish: Elif’ciğim, seni seviyorum.
