SUMMARY 10
SAMENVATTING 12

1 INTRODUCTION 14
1.1 The dynamic urban system in need of alternative thinking and planning 15
1.2 Theoretical core: complex adaptive systems, self-organization, urban land use and spatial planning 20
1.3 Research objective and main questions 29
1.4 Research strategy 30
1.5 Research organization 35

2 CHINA: WHAT ABOUT THE URBAN REVOLUTION? 38
2.1 Introduction 39
2.2 The rises and falls of planning in China: How it has been influenced by European planning 42
2.3 Reasons for divergences in Chinese planning 48
2.4 Challenges and possible transitions 51
2.5 Enhancing planning theory and practice: learning from both worlds 53

3 URBAN LAND CHANGES AS THE INTERACTION BETWEEN SELF-ORGANIZATION AND INSTITUTIONS 56
3.1 Introduction 57
3.2 Applying complexity thinking to planning 59
3.3 Research methods and case background 62
3.4 Case analysis 63
3.5 Discussion 73

4 INTERDEPENDENCY OF SELF-ORGANIZATION AND PLANNING: EVIDENCE FROM NANLUOGUXIANG AT BEIJING 78
4.1 Introduction 79
4.2 Case and methods 82
4.3 Self-organization as a mechanism for urban transformation 85
4.4 Self-organization is not necessarily socially desirable 90
4.5 Self-organization can be steered by planning 93
4.6 Discussion and conclusion 101

5 UNDERSTANDING SELF-ORGANIZING URBAN TRANSFORMATION AND THE ROLE OF FORMAL INSTITUTIONS 106
5.1 Introduction 107
5.2 Setting the scene 110
5.3 The mechanism of self-organization in cities 111
5.4 A Case: The transformation of Gaobeidian ‘Village’ in Beijing 114
5.5 The role of institutions in the transformation of Gaobeidian 123
5.6 Conclusions 128

6 CONCLUSIONS, POLICY IMPLICATIONS AND RESEARCH RECOMMENDATIONS 132
6.1 Reconsider urban transformations: interactions between self-organization and planning 133
6.2 Policy implications 142
6.3 Future research recommendation 145
