LAST BUT NOT LEAST…

I want to thank a number of people that significantly contributed to this thesis.

First of all my supervisor Dick Janssen, for the inspiring discussions, the faith in my research, and the lessons on “not writing too complex”. I really learned a lot from you and enjoyed being in your lab!

I am also very grateful for the insight into the industrial point of view on biocatalysis that I got due to the members of the “STW-begeleidingscommissie”, Nico Boots, Theo Sonke, Jan-Metske van der Laan, Chris Winkel, and Sven Panke. Our meetings twice per year were always very stimulating and instructive (and a nice opportunity to visit different places in The Netherlands)!

Thanks to the professors Lubbert Dijkhuizen, Wim Quax, and Dick van Elsas for the positive assessment of my thesis.

And of course, also a big smile to all the colleagues, students and guest researchers of the Janssen-group, who were always willing to share ideas, problems and beers… particularly Lixia (room mate, perfect catering during the bioinformatics course in Bochum), Bert (room mate and living chronicle, specialized in football and Wageningen history), Jin II (room mate and experienced in loempia frying), Mariël (room mate and ever-freezing predecessor at the desk close to the heating), Inez (ex-supervisor in how to get mad with fermentors), Nanne (how to survive in Beijum and ever-singing piano fan), Jolanda (organization talent and perfectionist), Wynand (ex-PA group member, now computer nerd), the biodegradation people Johan, Tjibbe, and Wouter, Simon (the last combatant on the penicillin acylase field), Martijn (almost managed to get hit by me), Erik v. H. (likes to play in the dirt and thus metagenome bank successor), Isabel (globetrotter and “Southern temperament”), Ghannia (how to create a mess in the lab…), Marco (…and how to clean it up; deserving borrel organizer), Maja (Not Without My Daughter), Ditte (lend a dog), Dominic (Nanne II and carnival fetishist), Chiara (best Italian coffee, but slightly failed muffins), Helen (cool haircuts), Maria (enthusiast soccer fan, even moved to Porto for the EURO 2004), Jantien (doc, post-doc, mother), Zbyněk (squash and Becherovka), Peter (competitor for HPLC measuring time), Gerard (one-man research group), Jaap (still consumer of an astonishing amount of coffee), Piet (keeper of the fermentors and a great help with HPLC, robot and computer problems), Sandra E. (personified Limburgs-speaking enthusiasm), Nico (repairs just everything). Sandra H., Tamara, and Hilda (always ready to help with sending papers or filling in weird forms) and, finally, the students Freek and Hendrie, who helped to struggle with not yet optimal procedures for gene bank construction. Special thanks to Erik d. V. (sightseeing- and Baltika-guide in tropical Moscow, high proofreading activity) and Jeffrey (unforgettable camping-trip to the rainforest without a tent) for willing to be my paranifmfen. Dear all, I will always remember the fun of the sailing week-ends, adventure trips (Six Flags and Duinrell), wine tastings, BBQs, movie evenings, borrels, lab uitjes, and the hundreds of coffee and lunch breaks we spent together!
My family and friends in “Good Old Germany”, I want to thank for their constant support, regular visits, hugh investments in telephone bills, and for reminding me that work is only a part of life. And there is of course Christian, who shared the Dutch exile (including bitterballen, kaas, and koniginnen dag) and the ups and downs of a PhD research project. We had a great time on our Animal Farm in the Munsterheerd, and I am sure it will become even better – wherever that may be!

And for those I forgot: don’t be offended – but get ready for the party on 9 July!
