Here I want to address various people who have helped me throughout my time in the Netherlands.

Thank you, first, to my advisor Pauline Kleingeld for supervising my work on this project. I benefited hugely from your guidance and patience throughout the project. From providing literature sources to giving comments and analysis on my writing, teaching and presentations, your advice was always thoughtful, helpful and cheerful.

Thank you also to my colleagues Markus Schlosser and Hanno Sauer. Markus, I could always rely on you to have a thoughtful comment or argument during discussions. Your experience studying and working in the UK gave us a shared culture to discuss, especially in the early years after I had moved abroad. Hanno, you were my officemate and we quickly became close friends. We routinely spent part of the day chatting about some philosophical opinion, cultural novelty or other random topics. I enjoyed being exposed to your always interesting and often controversial points-of-view. Thank you for all the games of squash and for agreeing to be my paranymph.

I would like to acknowledge and thank the Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research (NWO) for funding the project ‘Morality Beyond Illusions’, of which my own research was a part. Without this funding I would have been unable to complete my research, or present it at various conferences and workshops around the world.

Doing philosophy in the Netherlands was made easier and much more fun by having colleagues with whom I could meet and discuss work at different universities, whether this was in a formal setting or in the bar afterwards. I would like to acknowledge many people in the Dutch philosophy scene, including but not limited to: Peter Timmerman, Paulien Snellen, Marijana Milosavljevic-Vujosevic, Joel Anderson, Bruno Verbeek, Jamie Pearson, Frank Hindriks, Anti Kauppinen, Maureen See, Bert Musschenga, Laurens van Apeldoorn, Philip Robichaud, Alan Thomas, Marcel Verweij, Thomas Fossen, Wouter Sanderse, Sean Gould, and many others.
Acknowledgements

Some of those I have mentioned are owed specific thanks. In particular, I would like to thank Paulien Snellen for translating my dissertation summary into Dutch and, with Jitse Talsma, for a very enjoyable reading group. Thank you Marcel Verweij for your guidance during my Masters study. Thank you Joel Anderson for your help with teaching in Utrecht. Thank you also to Pauline and Joel for many enjoyable dinner parties, and for giving me tips on moving to and living in the US.

I would like to acknowledge the staff and graduate students at the University of Manchester for hosting me as a visiting scholar. They were very welcoming and supportive at what was a difficult time for many of them. In particular, I would like to thank Hichem Naar for his friendship and his eagerness to engage in philosophical discussion.

I want to thank many friends in Leiden who made my six years there so memorable. Mark, Olga, Allison, Alex (West), Mart, Rene, Gorana, Alex (South), Marissa, Monica, Bernard, Mattia, Anna, Mason, Mihkel, Yuval, Edu, Esteban. There are countless things I could thank you for specifically, but not the space to do so. Instead, I will thank you for all the dinners, parties, film nights, games nights, boat rides, chats (both serious and silly), and everything else in between. Mark, thank you for encouraging me to go to Odessa and meet new people when I first arrived (one in particular!). Allison and Alex, thank you both for giving me a place to stay when I was in limbo at the other end of my time in Leiden.

To my friends in Lewes: Josh, Jack, Harriet, Paddy, Grant, Henry, Nava and many others. I am very lucky to have grown up with such interesting and intelligent people. I look forward to many more whiskies, games of chess, walks and chats in the coming years. I would like to thank Josh, in particular, for agreeing to be my paranymph during my defence.

Thank you to my family for supporting my choice to study philosophy, and for being understanding when I moved abroad to do so. My moral and political intuitions are undoubtedly rooted in those of my parents, and I thank them for their open discussion of such issues as I grew up. My Mum had a lifelong interest in learning. She studied for a Masters degree whilst I was a baby (getting not only a Distinction, but an award for best Masters that year). Even at the end of her life she completed a Diploma at the Open University. Her love of learning and endless optimism are inspirational to me; I hope to have these attributes as I go through life. My Dad is a constant source of support and wise advice. Dad, your guidance as I have made important life choices has been invaluable and I know it will continue to be so. We have always enjoyed traveling in the US, and I look forward to many more such trips together now that I am local! Lis, I have always admired (and been somewhat jealous) of your achievements. As I was finishing up my PhD and looking with horror at my job prospects, you told me that you were leaving your job to work full-time on your studies! After briefly thinking you had lost your mind, I decided that if anyone could make that career move work, it was you. Arun, I am very lucky to have you as an older brother. You have done so much for me over the years. From helping look after me as a baby, through playing computer games with me on your BBC computer, to introducing me to jazz and Frisbee, I am very grateful. Though we only see each other infrequently, I look forward to appreciating your increasingly Dad-ish jokes next time we are all together. Thank you, and Carine, for being such generous hosts in Dubai. I look forward to many more long brunches and to playing with Chloé and Manon as they grow up.

Thank you Susan and Sia Meshkat for your generosity and kindness. From the first time I stayed at your house you have always been welcoming and inclusive. Now that Tiffany and I have moved to California, your continued support helps us in so many ways as we establish our new lives. Thank you also to Nikki and Chris for all the fun times in Carlsbad, Portland, Leiden and wine country!

Finally, thank you Tiffany for being with me on this journey. My time in Leiden is defined above all else by you. For your support and love I am forever grateful.
