REFERENCES

References

References

References

References

References

References

References

References

References

Paschke M. W. and Dawson J. O. (1990) Frankia infective capacity is enhanced in a Betula nigra plantation soil. Forestry Research Report 90, Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign.

References

References

Selim S. and Schwencke J. (1994) 1,2-Dipalmitoyl phosphatidylcholine, 1,2-dipalmitoyl phosphatidic acid or 1,2-dipalmitoyl-sn-glycerol inhibit sporangia formation and promote exponential growth of various Frankia isolates from the Casuarinaceae family. Soil Biology and Biochemistry 26, 569-575.

References

References

References

References

References

References

